

To the friends & family of Zelda Muffin Pants Cushingamm

TL;DR – our fluffy kitty might have cancer.

She's having surgery on Wednesday, Feb. 11th to remove and biopsy a couple marble-sized masses.

Community ask: as you can imagine, this has all been quite difficult. If you're able, any emotional and/or financial support would be massively appreciated ❤️

More info on the surgery:

Our sweet elderly baby has developed a few cysts/masses: one behind each ear (back of her mandible) and one on her belly.

We don't know if they're malignant or not, but their rate of growth and the fact that they've multiplied are concerning factors, so it's probable. The only way to know for sure is to biopsy, and if they're going to put her under and cut into these lumps, they might as well remove them at the same time.

Her surgery on Feb. 11th will remove two of the three growths, because the vet doesn't want her under anesthesia too long. Depending on the biopsy results, another surgery could be in her future, or we might opt to let her be if the recovery from the first procedure is too hard on her.

There's a lot we won't know until after they are removed.

Help! Zelda is 15 years old and has had a full, adventurous, and storied life, but I'm just not ready, and I don't think she is, either.

The last couple years have been very tough, and all the while she's been my one constant companion.

GoFundBrie!

It's hard to ask for help and I'd never want anyone to feel obligated, but if you have any extra nickels that you'd like to donate to the cause, it would be immensely helpful. ❤️

The surgery cost is $1,800-$2,200

Zelda facts:

- Loves catnip as much as catnaps
- If Cerberus the 3-headed dog guards the gates of Hell, Zelda guards the gates of Heck
- Zelda has lived in: New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Florida, Oregon, Idaho, Las Vegas, Colorado, and California (San Francisco, Oakland, and San Diego).
- In the last year alone she has moved with me from Hood River, OR to Las Vegas to Colorado, and she has been on 3 trips by plane: twice to California and once to Rhode Island.
